

thinking of becoming a course rep?

what do they do?

Course Representatives work to create positive change at a course level so that every student at the University of Plymouth has an effective and fulfilling academic experience.

Course Reps gather constructive feedback and ideas from their peers to present to university staff at the relevant meetings and to communicate any changes or key information to their cohort.

why should I do it?

- Gain new transferable skills such as how to collect feedback, and good communication.
- Access training to support your personal development
- Increase employability
- Make a positive impact on your course
- Be recognised and rewarded
